Info centre perfect fit at Kiwi Country

Geraldine Information Centre, renamed and independent, relocated to the Kiwi Country Visitor Complex in November 2015.

Complex manager Jo Hanifin says, "Our backing's from the council. They had involved us in discussion about the i-SITE's future. We put a proposal together and, in the end, nothing filled the gap like we could."

Now, at the end of a season enlivened not just by the extra scope of information provision, but also by, "the Chinese market's massive growth, people getting on their feet post-earthquake and the positive things ahead".

Jo says the step was right. "It came at the peak of the tourist season. But it's been really good."

The complex's diversity and capacity made it a good home for Geraldine's information service. "We work with dozens of tour companies and local groups, we get a lot of foreign, independent travellers and we have relationships with tour companies that put customers into rental cars," says Jo. Assistant manager Noriko Cosgriff says, "And we help customers who can't speak much English."

Two part-time i-SITE workers, transferring to Kiwi Country, assimilated cafe, retail and foreign-exchange roles and the complex's existing employees took on specialist information tasks. "There are 15 staff, and we all do all of it," says Jo. As far as possible, this includes work in other languages. "We learn a few different languages," says Noriko. "It's helpful. Necessary."

Information centre basics, including regular left-field enquiries, are ongoing. Jo says, "We do bookings for excursions, accommodation and local activities for no charge. We don't do bookings for things outside the district but we'll find information about them." Queries on a wider spectrum of subjects come from locals. "We've been asked about SIM cards, the pigeon fanciers' club, WINZ problems..." says Jo.

Assistant Cody Millard says, "We have computers so people can do things for themselves, but we'll do it for those who struggle." Jo says, "We don't let people go away not knowing."

The complex's healthy networks support strong district promotion. Jo says, "Revenue from companies advertising at Kiwi Country goes straight to Go Geraldine and, this month, we're doing a district familiarisation with Janene Adams [Go Geraldine co-ordinator]. We encourage guests to look at our museums, the niche-y shops..."

Timaru District councillor Kerry Stevens says, "The main advantage is the professionalism the new organisation brings. And they've reached out to the local community to promote local products. They've extended the hours and the service runs at a cheaper cost than before. The council puts that saving into online resources promoting the district."

Jo says work is going into "putting an external touch-screen information facility on the outside of the building", to allow access to the information centre's services outside opening hours.

Easy ways to save money on hot water

LANDLORDS - you can help your tenants:

- If the shower fills a 10-litre bucket in less than a minute, it's wasting water. Replacing the shower head for one with a more efficient flow rate of 9 litres/minute or less. Or install an inexpensive shower flow restrictor.
- Flow control aerators for taps cost between $10 and $30 and can halve the volume of water you use while still giving good pressure. They're great for taps over sinks or tubs that aren't regularly filled up, so the water flow volume is less important.
- Fix dripping hot taps.
- Choose efficient water products.
- Wrap your hot water cylinder and hot water pipes. Pre-2002 electric hot-water cylinders aren't insulated very well and should have a cylinder wrap. You should also insulate the first 1 to 1.5 metres of hot-water pipe coming off your hot-water cylinder.

- Check your hot-water temperature. It should be 60°C at the cylinder (to prevent the growth of legionella bacteria) and no more than 55°C at the tap so you don't get burnt (children are particularly vulnerable).

EASY HOT-WATER HABITS

- Wash your clothes in cold water - at four loads a week, this could save you around $50-$80 each year.

- Fill the sink - rather than leaving the hot water running when doing things like shaving.
- Shower rather than bath - it typically uses only half as much water and energy.
- Skip the hour-long shower. In a household of three, each minute you add to your shower time is about $70 a year.
- Rinse dishes with cold - rather than hot water.
- Run the dishwasher only when it is fully loaded - and on an "eco" wash setting if available.

Geraldine Scouts' problem

The Geraldine Scout Group is growing in leaps and bounds, which creates a "good problem" says group leader Brian Mowat-Gainsford.

"The popularity of Scouting in Geraldine has increased the need for new leaders to join and support the delivery of a busy and challenging programme to the boys each week," says Brian. "We have some amazing leaders, bringing diverse interests and experiences to the organisation and we would love to add to our team."

Assistant group leader Rebecca Tilsley says, "Often leaders are drawn from the families of the children attending the various sections of Scouts and they tend to move through the sections with their children. This means that we are always on the look-out for new leaders to join us."

Geraldine Scouts chairman, Mike Plows, says the group is in an excellent position but emphasises that it is vital to have an ongoing pipeline of leaders coming into the organisation. "I urge people to get in touch if they are interested in becoming part of a positive, fun organisation that helps grow great children into accomplished young adults."

To attract new prospective leaders the Geraldine Scout Group will be holding an Information and Recruitment Evening on Wednesday 27 July at 7pm at the Scout Den on Talbot Street. For more information on becoming a leader contact Brian Mowat-Gainsford on 693 9829.

Bookmaking and binding workshop

Sandy Corbett has been involved in art and craft activities for most of her adult life. In the last 18 years she has focused specifically on book art, boxes, book binding, temari balls and paper crafts. Sandy teaches book art/binding and paper crafts, and temari from entry level through to more complex designs.

Sandy manages her own small design business offering original paper and book art on a commission basis – including wedding and special occasion albums, memorabilia books and restoration.

On 6 and 7 August, Sandy will be teaching bookmaking and binding at Studio 226. Learn the rules of what to do and what not to do with paper and then you can see how far you can stretch/bend/break them. Breastfeeding training Plunket in South Canterbury has been training women to act as volunteer breastfeeding counsellors for seven years. Plunket is keen to add to the local group, as Geraldine is fast becoming a hub for new families.

The training offered by the Breastfeeding Works! programme covers a range of topics to do with supporting nursing women, and is being offered (for free) to local women who have had experience feeding their own children. Running once a week for around seven weeks, this training course is a great opportunity for women to add to their own knowledge and education.

Save The Children Fund bridge tournament marks 50 years

Geraldine Save the Children Fund has just run its 50th annual bridge tournament. For the first 20 years it was run privately and, since 1986, the tournament has been supported by the Geraldine Bridge Club. This year the event attracted 56 players and raised over $1500 for the charity.

Geraldine Bridge Club vice-president John Harmon says, "The club applauds the work of Save the Children Fund so we assist in helping to run this special event on the bridge calendar. As well as our own club members, players attend from clubs throughout the wider district from Oamaru to Christchurch."

The organisers cater with morning and afternoon teas as well as a delicious three-course lunch. "This tournament is a win-win event," says John. "Bridge enthusiasts get to play in a well-run social event which has a charitable purpose."

Geraldine Save the Children Fund co-president Shirley Sheed really values the joint venture which provides a significant sum each year to the charity. "Working with the bridge club is a great way of raising funds for our organisation which are used to help children in need." Shirley says that all funds raised go towards helping children locally, nationally and internationally.

GROW YOUR OWN: No-dig gardening

No-dig gardens are a fantastic way of growing nutritious produce, quickly, and without the need for any digging. It's a simple concept, where material is laid down in layers, well watered, then planted into. After harvesting from the beds, you continue to add layers of material, rather than having to dig the beds over. Kids love helping with these sorts of gardens, and with a little guidance they can do much of the work themselves.

A good no-dig gardening method is to begin with a plot, ideally a raised bed already built, or you can build one yourself using non-toxic materials – bricks or untreated wood for instance. Once you have your plot ready, begin laying down the appropriate materials. As you lay down each layer, give the bed a good soak with the hose; you want the garden to act like one big sponge, and each layer needs to be moist to enable this.

Start with a thick layer of cardboard soaked in water, or hosed down thoroughly. This suppresses grass and weeds and is our first layer of brown material.

Next is the green layer: use green materials such as grass clippings, vege scraps or weeds (without seeds). Nettle is particularly good for this purpose; harvest the nettle before it sets seed and make sure there are no roots still attached. If using grass clippings, don't lay them too thickly – 10cm thick, maximum – or there won't be enough oxygen and it will become sludgy. You want a light, fluffy layer of grass, rather than a thick, dense layer. If you use weeds and other green material, there's no need to chop them up finely; stalks and bits and pieces increase airflow and help create the sponge effect.

Follow this green layer with a layer of manure or worm castings – this fertilises the garden and helps supply worms. Blood and bone also works well. On top of this, lay an additional green layer (grass clippings or finely shredded paper). Then add a good thick layer of organic compost. If you have fallen leaves at hand, add this as a final layer to act as mulch and promote a flush of beneficial fungi.

Now the garden is ready to plant. Right now, you can sow peas, snow peas, spinach, bok choy and other hardy leafy greens. Or leave the bed to rest until late winter/early spring before sowing or transplanting fast growing salad greens for quick no-fuss edibles.

GERALDINE'S NEWS IN BRIEF

Geraldine on sale in July

Geraldine is on sale again.

For the second year running, a significant number of Geraldine retailers have got together and promoted themselves under the Geraldine On Sale In July banner.

The promotion has been co-ordinated by a committee, and those contacted say that it has built on last year's success. Spokesperson, Min Mackenzie from Talbot Silver, says that July is a great time to focus on because of activities like the Light the Night Trail and the rapidly-growing Uke Festival. School holiday visitors, especially those waiting for the ski season to start, are helping to make the retail area busy says Min.

"There's been a little bit of a buzz on the street. Some people say they're returning to Geraldine because they remember last year's promotion. Most of the retailers have got on board, especially those committed to the Totally Locally cause. It's great to have a bit of recognition and branding for Geraldine."

Retailers are free to approach the promotion in any way they wish – from across-the-board discounts on everything to sales tables and special offers.

Another member of the committee, Merran Blake from Joosh, says that participating retailers she has spoken to say they are happy and likely to put in the effort to make Geraldine On Sale In July an annual event.

Log shell in house of the year

Graeme Mould and his team at Natural Log Homes are celebrating the success of their contribution to a multi-award-winning home in Oamaru.

"We built the log shell in our yard," says Graeme. "Then it was dismantled and moved to its site on a dairy farm near Oamaru. We worked in with Lain Hellmrich and his team from High Country Carpentry in Fairlie. They did the conventional finishing to the home."

The finished home won four awards in the 2016 Registered Master Builders House of the Year Mid and South Canterbury competition: one for craftsmanship, one for sustainability, a gold award for the $1-2 million new home category and the supreme award for house of the year.

Graeme says the finished home is an amazing building on a beautiful site. He believes the awards will further enhance the reputation of log-building as an environmentally-friendly, safe and warm building system. "It's this sort of mainstream recognition that will change people's perceptions. Log-building has big advantages in terms of incredible insulation, earthquake strength and long-term sustainability."

BUILDING CONFIDENCE

Well-known New Zealand artists on show

“It’s an exhibition for the winter period,” says McAtamney Gallery and Design Store co-owner Carolyn McAtamney-Rasch.

“We’ve always done a few secondaries, but we’re deliberately focusing on doing more at the moment, especially these leading New Zealand artists.”

It’s “another dimension” for the gallery, says Carolyn, this temporary shift from full exhibitions of contemporary artists’ work, to showing the diverse group of “high-end historic” works that will be on display until spring. The exhibition extends across many genres and media and includes many landscapes Geraldine people will recognise.

“We have six Douglas Badcock works; they’re all oils, South Island landscapes, dating back at least to ’74 [some are undated]. Douglas won the Kelliher [art prize] and published three books about his painting,” says Carolyn.

Dunedin-based, Claire Beynon’s work is typically abstract, layered, large-scale and on paper. Carolyn says the single Beynon in the gallery is “in her style, really: large, an abstract in pastel, very moody, emotive, focused on horizons... It’s a work you fall in love with.”

The forlornness of Ivan Clarke’s dachshund, watching its family depart on holiday, was the genesis for a series titled Lonely Dog. An anthropomorphic, sophisticated world of dogs and cats unfolded, well-populated and detailed, in painted, drawn, sculpted and written forms.

“There’s a nice line of the history of Austen Deans’ work: dating from 1939. There are 10 works here currently. They’re all landscapes: most of them local, several watercolours and a couple of oils,” says Carolyn. The earliest is a watercolour of the bush in Peel Forest.

Roddy McMillan is the artist who constructed the Invercargill public sculpture of Burt Munro and created the single bronze, Tractor Engine. During his Invercargill childhood, Roddy worked alongside Munro in his shed, picking up know-how and inspiration for his later sculpting career.

Michel Tuffery trod a diplomatic path to completion and blessing of Welli Congi, an oil on tapa cloth, presently in the gallery. “He had to have permission to depict a taniwha in the Cake Tin [Wellington Regional Stadium].” The work’s unusual mix of influences and technique is in line with Michel Tuffery’s definition-defying cross-Pacific heritage and his strengths in many media.

The gallery has eight pastels and other works on paper by Marilyn Webb, who gained early-career international prominence as a printmaker interested in politics, post-colonial history and environmental matters. “These date back to the ’80s. They’re very, very good.”

Other artists’ include Michael Armstrong, Don Hill, John Badcock, John Kelman, Jan Ingram and Wayne Seyb.

BOWLS

The Geraldine Temuka Indoor Bowls Open Singles event was held with a good entry of 22 players. After the qualifying rounds were played nine players proceeded to the post section play. Lex Gibson and Cory Harnett played the bye round, and in a very close-fought match, Gibson won the game 10-9. The eight remaining players then battled it out to find the semi-finalists, being Gibson, Ray Christensen, Barry Black, and Michael Higgins. Gibson won his semi against Black by 15-6, and Higgins won over his clubmate Christensen 12-8.

The final was also a close game with Higgins getting off to a good start, but after Gibson scored a three on the 4th end the score sat at 4-all. Higgins scored a four on the 7th end to put him in good position at 9-5. Gibson scored on all but the last end, but was kept to single shots only, and with the score at 9-all going into the final end, Higgins scored the point to take the game 10-9.
